

Call For Articles !

The Journal of the National Grants Management Association is calling for articles for the Fall 2005 issue. A peer reviewed, archival publication, the Journal is interested in receiving articles between 1,500 and 3,000 words on topics of on-going interest to grantors and grantees engaged in federal grant activities. A stipend of $200 will be paid for each article accepted for publication (one stipend per article). Editorial services are available and first-time authors are not only welcome but encouraged.

The following subjects are illustrative of areas of particular interest to the Journal. This list is not intended to be all inclusive and authors are encouraged to be innovative in selecting topics for their articles.

- Performance management in the grants process
- Designing and implementing successful assessment and evaluation plans for federal grants
- Writing a successful grant proposal
- Developing and maintaining effective partnership in grant funded projects
- Grants management challenges & practices
